

Struggle For Freedom - Part I

Insurgence For Love

Introduction

The territory north of the alps is controlled by counts that are subordinated to the Holy Roman Empire, whose main interest in this area lies within the mountain passes that connect trade over the mountains.

Due to conflicts between the empire and the Vatican, a number of cities were removed from the control of their counts and now directly report to the emperor.

In practice, these cities operate largely autonomously, because the emperor is kept busy with campaigns and internal politics.

The House Of Habsburg managed to secure multiple counties through clever marriage arrangements. In their eyes, the autonomy of the Helvetic cities poses a problem.
